Grossartige Advaita LektreVon Gabriele Sch.Sanjay Inamdar and Manjit Achhra did a great job and thanks to Zen Publication in Mumbai for publishing the 'good company' of Dattatreya (The Advadhut Gita - Song of the Free) and Karl Renz (Quotes out of talks from the past years). What a treasure. Read it ... enjoy it ...

Kurzbeschreibung"Watch out. This is not another of those feel-good oneness Advaita books. This one is a double-barrelled shotgun taking pot shots at the conceptualising mind one barrel being fired by the great Indian mystic-sage Dattatreya (Avadhut) and the other by Karl Renz, the contemporary Avadhut. There is no escape here not just for the fragmented-mind but also for the enlightened whole-mind! Though Echoes of Silence may come across as the quintessential playground for a relentless game of deconstructing the mind, you cannot however miss its omnipresent soothing core of Silence! Paradoxically, only Timeless, Motionless Silence echoes and pervades here despite the volley of living words being fired by these two maverick entities separated by centuries and geographies, who apparently have not much in common except, perhaps, their own non-existence! So, what comes out of all this? Non-existing masters prattling empty words to non-existing seekers seeking non-existing liberation? Can you, as the one-existing-now, take it?! Find out for yourself as you set forth on this turbulent voyage, with these two bafflingly wise masters at the helm, through the treacherous seas of the mind. Survival is not guaranteed for any one! And the good part? You survive, no complaints. You perish, no complaints again. You simply cannot find the complainer here complaining to anyone about anything at all. All that remains is the carefree bliss of the eternal song of the duet of one or none."
