A good story but the occasional poor contrast between the text and background is a serious flawVon Charles AshbacherWhile this book contains a valuable message for children, there is one serious flaw in the printing. Shimmer is a glowworm living in the ME TREE with a glow that is less than that of her fellow glowworms. The weakness of her personal light saddens her and so she is reluctant to dance and play with them. One of her fellow glowworms suggests that she leave home and go out in the world in a trek to find a solution to her lesser light. In her journey Shimmer encounters many other interesting creatures and aids them in different ways. Once each of their problems is solved, Shimmer finds that she is glowing just a little bit brighter. At that point she understands that performance problems are generally solved from within. So she quickly goes back to the ME TREE with a wonderful story and a realization that she is special. Being able to face and solve your problems and learning to accept personal shortcomings is one of the most important lessons of life. In that respect, this is a very good story for children. The problem is the sometimes horrible contrast between the text and the background. Letters are sometimes white and sometimes black, which is not the issue. There are times when the background on a page changes so that there is dark lettering on a dark background or white lettering on a light background. This makes it very difficult to read, something that would be compounded if the reader is a child. I see this in childrens books on occasion and consider it a very serious flaw. The text should always be very clearly discernible from the background. This book was made available for free for review purposes

Kurzbeschreibung With an uplifting message and vibrant illustrations, this tale is filled with inspiration for every child that has ever forgotten...just how bright they SHINE! Children adore this fun adventure that is layered with relatable lessons. Shimmer the Glowworm has a low glow and sets off on a journey hoping to find her glow out there somewhere. Each time Shimmer meets a new friend, she inspires them. Ollie the Owl recognizes that we all have inner wisdom and we can share our ideas with others. Cray the Chameleon realizes how special his uniqueness is. Kiki the Kangaroo understands the importance of expressing her talents rather than downplaying them. Scout the Raccoon discovers the value of exploring new things and not giving up. As Shimmer the Glowworm heads back home, she realizes that when she encourages others to SHOW YOUR GLOW, her glow shines the brightest! The theme song SHOW YOUR GLOW further instills the message. What children say about Shimmer the Glowworm: Your book was super duper and it was awesome, awesome, awesome and it was very cool. I liked when Shimmer found her glow. - Alan I loved your book a lot. It is my favorite book now. My favorite was when Shimmer found her glow everytime she met someone. I would show my glow by being nice to people. - Kaelyn I loved Shimmer the Glowworm. My favorite part was when Cray turned rainbow colors! I could show my glow. I would be helping others like Shimmer did it. - Love Cindy. A great gift for any occasion.
